WHEREAS, The United States is entering its second winter of predicted fuel shortages, and South Dakota is among those States situated on the high plains which will again take the brunt of this crisis: and,

WHEREAS, All State Agencies involved in human services are beginning to prepare for the coming challenge with efforts that will enable them to respond quickly and affirmatively to emergency situations should they arise: and,

WHEREAS, It is most fitting and appropriate to acknowledge our stand in the fight to stave off any undue suffering by any citizens of our State, and to recruit the wholehearted effort of every man, woman and child of our State in an effort to conserve our energy resources:

NOW, THEREFORE, I, RICHARD F. KNEIP, Governor of the State of South Dakota, do hereby proclaim Thursday, November 7, 1974, as in South Dakota, and urge all citizens to take special note of their role in fuel conservation practices. With deep concern for those who are less fortunate, I feel it proper that we address this day, also, to the awareness of the impact that the fuel shortage will have on them.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the Great Seal of the State of South Dakota, in Pierre, the Capital City, this 7th day of November, in the Year of Our Lord, Nineteen Hundred and Seventy-Four
